BBA-609 CORPORATE FINANCE 3(3-0)

COURSE OBJECTIVES
The aim of this course is to give an introduction to the role of Corporate Finance in your daily lives and to see how the actions at a corporate level can impact on your personal wealth. Furthermore, you should, by the end of this course, be able to appreciate that the subject of Corporate Finance does not exist within a vacuum. Rather, it exists as an integral part of the overall realm of our daily activities. The manner in which we are able to understand and appreciate the corporate finance functions is through being able to understand the Financial Times pages and how these pages communicate the decisions and financial managers to us. Therefore, an important component part of the course is to be able to understand some of the terminology that the Financial Times employs as well as the figures that it presents. An underlying assumption that pervades through the corporate finance area is that financial managers operate and act to serve the interests of the shareholders. The assumption is that managers ensure that shareholder wealth is maximised by ensuring that the correct decisions are made that maximise on the wealth that each portion of capital can bring. However, as we all know, people do not always act in the interests of those that pay their salaries. Managers are no exceptions to this rule and so we find that they also tend to do what suits them best. Consider, for example, the below companies.

LEARNING OUTCOMES

The main objective is that students are able to critically analyse corporate decisions from a financial perspective. After the course, you should be able to:

- Compute the expected rate of return for investment projects.
